Foreword

University College Roosevelt is a liberal arts and sciences undergraduate honors college of Utrecht University dedicated to providing the best possible teaching and learning environment for its students. In addition to its core aim as a teaching college, UCR is involved in both regular and undergraduate research. It is our conviction that within a university setting there can be no sustained teaching excellence without research. This research report provides an overview of the output of the research activities in the course of 2015. It is the third consecutive annual UCR research report to be published. This foreword briefly synthesizes some of the successes in this report.

Undergraduate research (UR) is a centrally important activity at UCR. For a teaching college it is also the ideal way to support faculty whose main work is focused on teaching and service. Working in teams with talented UR students on contemporary societal research projects gives energy and dynamism to students and faculty alike. The undergraduate research community is funded through the student undergraduate research fund (SURF) which helps students financially with either internships for data collection or for presenting their work at either senior international research conferences or undergraduate research conferences. €25,000 is set aside for this. UCR funded 22 such projects in 2015. UCR students presented their research at major international conferences in, for example, the UK (stylistics/linguistics), Norway (psychology) and Denmark (psychology). Research internships were conducted in Bogota, Columbia, New York and closer to home in Utrecht/Nieuwegein and Eindhoven. More than twenty UCR students were also selected to present their research (SCI, SSC & A&H) at the national undergraduate research conference held in November 2015 in Middelburg.

Undergraduate research is also funded at UCR through the Utrecht University PUUR project (the program for upgrading undergraduate research) which UCR shares with her sister college UCU. It is a two-year program (2015-2016). Four PUUR UR research seminars are planned in this two-year period. One of those seminars, which was on human rights, took place in 2015 in cooperation with the Center for Humanities at Utrecht University. A publication (an edited volume) of the students' work is forthcoming in 2016. The PUUR project also stimulates research within UU by means of summer internships whereby students work alongside both senior scholars and their PhD students, usually gathering and analyzing data. In 2015 two UCR students took up such an internship, one of whom went on to become a member of the main research team, attending a conference with them in Poland in the autumn to present the findings of the project. An interim assessment of the PUUR program by UU held in the summer of 2015 labelled the project a success, saying that they are 'very pleased with the results booked in the first year'. The PUUR webpage hosted by UU also went live during the summer <http://www.uu.nl/onderwijs/puur-project-for-upgrading-undergraduate-research>

In addition to the SURF and PUUR programs, UCR is also active in UR within the Erasmus+ BLASTER grant framework (the "best of liberal arts and sciences expanded and reinforced"): Undergraduate Research is one of the three core pillars within that project. UCR also produces an annual edition of the undergraduate research journal Ad Astra. <https://issuu.com/adastraucr>

In addition to the undergraduate research at UCR, many UCR faculty members have been research active in 2015. Academic research performed UCR faculty in 2015 has been published in a variety of top journals ranging from Frontiers in Human Neuroscience and PLoS One to the International Journal of Human Rights. Books and chapters have also come out with leading publishers including Cambridge University Press, Palgrave Macmillan and Brill. Books have been published by UCR faculty on the topics of global citizenship, the politics of the European Union and sculpture in archaic and classical Athens. The published papers and books reflect the diversity in scientific background and broad interest of UCR's faculty. During 2015, four UCR faculty members completed and successfully defended their PhD thesis and two new full professors were appointed from outside the institution to help strengthen the research profile of the college.

A significant number of research talks were delivered by UCR faculty at international and national academic conferences. These included a number of keynote addresses. Many UCR faculty serve on editorial boards of journals and academic organizations, they review article manuscripts, they edit the work of their peers, they sit as panel members of promotions, they evaluate sister departments in national audits. The full professors within the UCR faculty are also supervising several PhD candidates, some of whom defended their PhDs at Utrecht University in the course of 2015. UCR full professors also played important roles as external examiners on PhD committees at other universities.

Outreach to the local community remains paramount to UCR's research aspirations. Successful ongoing local research projects include the "practical markers for Alzheimer's disease" project and the related "effects of light therapy in people with dementia" project.

Some of the many research highlights from 2015 include the hosting of a large international conference in Middelburg on global citizenship and the founding of the ancient sculpture association (jointly run from UCR and Duke University but hosted at UCR). UCR also helped to co-found the Zeeland graduate community (ZGC) which is based in Middelburg and is an initiative of the full professors of Zeeland, an independent body chaired by the UCR director of research and of which many UCR full professors are members. Furthermore, funding was won by UCR faculty in the form of the Erasmus+ BLASTER grant and the Erasmus+ Jean Monnet grant. Also, the EU funded TERRA II program, which aims to develop educational tools to foster emotional and social skills, amongst other things to combat radicalization, made important ground towards completion.

Moreover, Kairos, the UCR humanities and social sciences research center, was also active again in 2015 organizing an international symposium on 'War, Identity and Cultural Heritage' and hosting a number of national and international speakers including the American psychologist and cognitive scientist Lawrence Barsalou. Internally, UCR hosted eight research lunch talks throughout the year from both senior faculty and early career researchers (including PhD students). December 2015 also saw the founding of the first UCR cross-disciplinary research group: "Mind, Culture, Communication & Brain", an idea that came out of the research committee to foster the LAS philosophy in research. A number of UCR faculty from science, social science and humanities got together to design and execute experiments together with a number of talented UCR students. Publications, seminars and grant proposals are all in the pipeline for 2016 and beyond. More cross-disciplinary research groups are in the make, focusing on such things as 'sustainability/the environment' and 'big (digital) data'.

UCR has also actively supported the initiatives to strengthen Zeeland's knowledge infrastructure in 2015. In spring 2015, UCR played a key role in writing the report 'De Slimme Kracht van Zeeland' (Zeeland's smart power) that made it to provincial policy. UCR also contributed to 'Campus Zeeland', a policy memorandum drawn up by the Onderwijsautoriteit Zeeland (Zeeland Teaching Authority) that emphasizes the crucial importance of strengthening higher education and research in Zeeland. Some of the initiatives in it are the Roosevelt Centre for Excellence in Education, a Platform on Delta Research and a Second College with a focus on technology. In addition, the OAZ proposes 'Knowledge Tables' in which knowledge institutions, companies and other organizations work on societal problems. These initiatives create research opportunities for UCR faculty, for instance via support for research on teaching excellence, healthy ageing and social inclusion. Campus Zeeland was adopted as provincial policy after the 2015 elections. The RCEE, as one of the main Campus Zeeland initiatives, booked a number of academic successes in 2015, amongst which obtaining an NRO-grant for post-doctoral research and an NWO-teaching grant for a PhD researcher. In all, three new PhD students started at the RCEE in 2015.

Another way in which UCR contributes to general academic research in Zeeland is via its support to PhD students in general. UCR professors supervise PhDs, some of whom are in Middelburg, whilst others work elsewhere. To contribute to the general success of the PhD students in Middelburg UCR opened a PhD community in the Burg, and organized a number of lectures for the student.

Allocating faculty the time to do research and to embark on new research projects is also a key element of UCRs employability strategy, adopted in December 2015. Here, a plan is drawn up to support research sabbaticals, and to invest in high potential researchers. Seeking funding for the 'Towards a College Career' policy is one of the priorities for 2016.

In 2015, faculty research activities at UCR were stimulated by financial support from the research fund. The director of Research manages three research budgets: two UR and one faculty research (and PhD research). A total of €25.000 was available for faculty research, from which €5,000 was earmarked for (PhD) graduate funding. Faculty could also have a conference presentation visit directly funded from their own departmental budget (depending on budget and the budget division strategy). Undergraduate research projects (primarily internships and conference talks) could claim funds from the (SURF) Student Undergraduate Research Fund for which €25,000 is available. The internship money for the (PUUR) Project for Upgrading Undergraduate Research totaled €7,500. The current director of research started as PUUR UR coordinator on January 1st 2015, as SURF UR coordinator on May 1 2015 and as Director of Faculty Research on September 1st, 2015 and has managed these budgets since these dates.

In this report, the names of UCR faculty members are underlined. UCR students who serve as co-authors or co-presenters are indicated with an asterisk*. Note that since undergraduates publish together with faculty, such undergraduate publications will be reported in the both the faculty research overview and in the undergraduate research report.
